Yost and Gotthart Doerr Farm

Grantsville

Private

Late 19th and Early 20th century

The Yost and Gotthart Doerr Farm was first settled by Yost Doerr after he moved here from Germany and bought this piece of land in 1878. The two story log dwelling and frame barn that he constructed are no longer standing, but the complex of late nineteenth century frame outbuildings that he and his son Gotthart built are still utilized on the farm. These outbuildings include a springhouse/workshop, a smokehouse, a chickenhouse, and a sugar camp. In 1912 Gotthart built a frame, two story, T-plan dwelling with facade and rear porches. It remains in its original state without the addition of plumbing or electrical systems even though the house is still occupied.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Yost and Gotthart Doerr Farm is located on the west side of Foster's Inn Road approximately .5 mile south of its intersection with U.S. Route 40. The site is set back from the road .1 mile and consists of an early twentieth century house and bank barn, and a complex of late nineteenth century outbuildings including a springhouse/workshop, smokehouse, chicken house, and sugar camp.

The house is a balloon frame, two story, gable-roofed building on a poured concrete foundation. Its basic configuration is a T-plan that consists of a three bay by two bay main block with a one bay by one bay rear wing. The facade has a symmetrical three bay, center door arrangement. A flat-roofed porch with four Tuscan columns on a concrete pier foundation extends the length of the three bays but not the entire length of the facade. A shed-roofed porch with chamfered posts shelters the southeast side of the wing. All windows are one over one sash with plain board surrounds and simple drip moldings. The first floor facade windows, however, are wider than the others and have a narrow upper pane and a large, square lower pane. Small, rectangular casement windows with the same type of molding as the sash windows pierce each of the three gables. The northwest and southwest gables are each lit by a single window; the southeast gable has two smaller windows flanking an interior brick stove chimney. Both the facade and rear doors are topped by transom lights. The facade door has five raised panels in its lower half with a bas relief wreath in the center panel, and a frosted glass window above, imprinted with the image of an eight point deer set within an oval floral border.

The exterior walls are covered with Cucumber wood German siding of varying widths, and the roof is clad with large, diamond-shaped asphalt shingles. Two interior brick stove chimneys are located on the ridgeline of the main block and another is situated on the ridgeline of the rear wing. The basement, which is dug only under the main block, serves as a cave (root cellar). The house remains in its original state without the addition of electrical or plumbing systems; stoves are still used, to heat the building.

The barn, which is located west of the house, rests on a coursed, roughly squared stone foundation and is supported by a circular sawn frame that is mortise and tenoned together.

The springhouse/workshop is set into a hill approximately 15 feet southeast of the house. The whitewashed, dressed stone cellar contains the spring, while the frame structure above it with 2 over 2 sash windows and a brick chimney was used as a shop.

The smokehouse, which sits approximately 4 feet south of the springhouse, rests on stone footings and a hewn sill. Its stud frame is covered with German siding.

The chicken house is a two room board and batten structure that is situated between the house and barn.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Yost Doerr came to this country from Germany ca. 1870 and bought this piece of land in 1878.¹ On it he built a two story log dwelling (two rooms per floor) and a barn.² In 1890 his son Gotthart aquired the land³ and soon after erected the outbuildings now on the property. By 1900 Gotthart had replaced the original barn and in 1912 he built the new frame house.⁴

The log dwelling and the original barn built by Yost are no longer standing.

Yost and Gotthart Doerr Farm

A sugar camp, which is still used, lies approximately .1 mile northwest of the house in a wooded area. The interior was not accessible, however, the present owner reports that the frame is constructed with straight sawn lumber. The building rests on a coursed, roughly squared stone foundation, has a hewn plate and pole rafters.
